WHEELING, JANUARY 26, 1893.

REPUBLICAN CITY TICKET.

FOR MAYOR,
D. F. CALDWELL.
CITY CLERK,
CHARLES F. SCHULTZ.
CITY SECRETARY,
THOS. D. HENNETT.
WARD MASTER,
JOHN R. MARSH.

Must Be Scared.

Our old friends of the German-American Cleveland Union of Wheeling come to the front again. This time it is in behalf of the whole Democratic ticket to be voted for to-day. A German circular, signed by the executive committee, urges every German to vote the straight Democratic ticket. This is the way the Cleveland Union feels about it and this is the bad advice it gives.

The INTELLIGENCER finds great pleasure in being able to assure the Democratic politicians who run the Cleveland Union that they cannot marshal all the German-American hosts of Wheeling for the straight Democratic ticket, nor can they vote all the German-American Democrats that way.

It happens that among the German-American Democrats of Wheeling are some of the most thoughtful of our citizens, men who see the drift of things and are not willing that things shall continue to drift in that direction. They will go to the polls to-day and vote, not as Germans, not as Democrats, but for the best interests of the community of which they are a very solid part.

The circular of the Cleveland Union carries with it no more weight than any other Democratic scheme. Is anybody getting scared?

A good citizen will go to the polls to-day to vote for the best interests of his city.

The Street Car Strike.

The street car company is preparing to operate its line with new men. The INTELLIGENCER regrets that there has been a break between the company and its men, but so it is. The company discharged two employees and the others refused to work. The company declares its purpose to run its cars. The strikers are represented as saying that they are in for a fight. Yesterday a party of men, said to be strikers, interfered with a car and drove a conductor from it.

It is bad to get started wrong in these matters. If an employer and his employees cannot get along it is the right of either side to dissolve relations with the other and go about its business. The laborers may seek new employers, the employers new laborers. The right of each to pursue his way unmolested is his right to live; society can permit no interference with it.

To admit interference as a right would be to allow lawless force to triumph as it might until it encountered a stronger. This would be the dissolution of organized society, which is the only protection the weak have against the strong. If society were to be shattered to pieces in this way it would form again with the rich and powerful on top.

If the men can win against the street car company, all right; but while they are engaged in the contest let them be very careful not to transgress the law. That would be a serious blunder that would lose them friends.

Vorn to-day for the best men and try to get the best city government you can. There is great need of a change.

Organized Charity.

John Boyle O'Reilly speaks in poetic scorn of
The organized charity, scribbled and loed,
In the name of a cautious, statistical Christ.

These are striking lines and do very well in poetry. The fact remains that organized charity is charity in its most efficient form. This all experience proves. Its aim is to make every dollar do a hundred cents' worth of good for the deserving needy, to weed out impostors and prevent their eating the bread of the suffering poor.

To disband the organized charities of the world would be to set the world back. The poor who understand what organized charity is would be the last to throw stones at it.

If you don't like what this Democratic council has done vote for a change.

NEWSPAPERS are making the point that there is a great deal of road improvement talk and not much road improvement. The talk must come first. The people must be brought up to the idea through a "campaign of education." First words, then action. Don't fret about the talk. That is all right. One of these fine days we shall dig ourselves out of the mud.

Never mind the politicians. This is distinctly the people's election of men to transact their local business. Don't vote for a man whom you know to be unworthy.

The Police and Electric Mishaps.
Andrew Snyder, killed by an electric light wire in front of the postoffice, could have been saved if any of the bystanders had known what to do. No blame, of course, is to be visited on those who looked on, for they did not know how to rescue him.

The wire was in contact with his body, filling the poor fellow with its deadly energy, and nobody dared to touch it. The contact could have been broken easily and safely by throwing a handkerchief around the wire and pulling it away. Policemen were present, but they knew no more than any one else what to do.

In view of the rapid multiplying of electric wires of all sorts, seeing that they are everywhere stretching in every direction, likely to make trouble at any time, the police should be instructed what to do in case of emergency, how to handle the live wire with safety to themselves and how to care for an injured person until medical help can be had.

No doubt the physicians of Wheeling would be glad to give the police force a simple course of instruction either at headquarters or at the city hospital. The increasing use of electrical appliances will give the police a widening field of usefulness, and they could be equipped easily to render an additional public service. This, of course, they would be glad to do if they knew how.

It is time to change the city boards, so that they may be overhauled. With such a council as the present one at the back of them you can't see the inside of one of them.

The President and the Justice.

In Washington it is thought doubtful whether the senate would confirm a successor to Justice Lamar if appointed by President Harrison. It is assumed that Democrats would take the position that it would be unseemly to make the appointment so near the close of a presidential term; and it is believed that some Republican senators take this view.

This is by no means a new point. It was raised early in the country's history, and after long, sometimes bitter, discussion, it is left to the President to say what he will do as to nominations, to the senate to say what it will do as to confirmations.

It is difficult to see how delicacy, propriety or right can be violated by the mere discharge of an executive duty. It is one of the President's duties to nominate to vacancies on the supreme bench. It is as much his duty in the closing as in the opening months of his administration, and if he nominate a worthy person he may complacently leave the rest to the senate.

To say that the President should leave this vacancy for his successor to fill is to say that a fantastic notion of delicacy is to end his term before the constitution ends it. If there be anything in this point it would be better to change the constitution so that the President shall hand the office over to his successor the day after the election, so that we may have a real President at full liberty to give us a real administration of his office.

It is in far-away Bohemia that a hundred and thirty men are buried in a mine, but they are human beings overtaken suddenly by a frightful fate.

The Winter Race Track.

The race-track gamblers of New Jersey own that state. Encouraged by their example a descent is about to be made on the Indiana legislature to see what business may be done there in the interest of Roby, a winter racing course near Chicago. A bill has been introduced in the Indiana legislature to prohibit winter racing, and the gamblers are on hand with money. These winter races bear not the slightest resemblance to the legitimate races which come in the racing season. In the inelegant language of the sports, they are "skin" games from beginning to end. Besides that they are brutal.

The Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph suggests that as Mr. Camden is to have the honor of serving out the unexpired term of Senator Kenna he give Mr. Kenna's widow the salary. The Charleston postoffice is talked of for Mrs. Kenna. The West Virginia delegation is united in this behalf.

If President Grant had made Charles A. Dana collector of the port of New York Mr. Dana would not have been abusing Rutherford B. Hayes all these years. That grievous disappointment was the turning point in Mr. Dana's political career. It also disturbed his liver.

Junus Gove is being talked of in Washington as a possible successor to Justice Lamar. That would be a promotion to which the senate would hardly refuse to consent.

Chicago Presbyterians beg the two sides of the Presbyterian controversy to pull off and agree to pull together for good. Are there any responses in the east?

Mean publicity has been given the report that ex-President Hayes voted for Mr. Cleveland. It is incredible. (Cleveland Commercial Gazette.)

It is also absurdly untrue.

PERSONAL POINTS.

The chief incidents in the journey around the world begun a few days ago by Archduke Franz Ferdinand, of Austria, presumptive heir to the throne, are to be commemorated in a book.

The German emperor possesses a magnificent collection of lace of all kinds, which has lately been valued at 1,000,000 marks, or $250,000. A set of Brussels point, the present of the king of Belgium to the empress on her marriage, is of special beauty.

Chauncey M. Depew proposed a great dinner to President Harrison at Madison Square Garden on his retirement from office. But the President, it is said, has declined it on account of his late bereavements.

Miss Sherman, daughter of Senator Sherman, gave a luncheon in Washington to a company asked to meet Miss Campbell, daughter of Governor Campbell, of Ohio.

"He will survive us all," said General Butler of Blaine the night before he died. The death of ex-President Hayes looks as if the old general hit it about right.

Vice President and Mrs. Morton gave a dinner at Washington Tuesday evening in honor of Bishop Potter, of New York.

Mrs. Satolli, first delegate apostrophe to this country, will receive a salary of $3,000 a year—about $2,000.

Edward Murphy, soon to be United States senator from New York, is the victim of sciatia.

GENERAL HAYES.

America has reason to be proud of the distinguished man who passed away from earth at his home in Fremont, Ohio. In peace and in war, in public and in private life, Rutherford B. Hayes was a model citizen of the republic.—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

He performed the duties of his office with honesty of purpose, unmarked by great strength of character or great manifestations of genius.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

History will concede to him a high place as a model governor, a brave soldier and an able and honest president.—Columbus State Journal.

In the death of Mr. Hayes the nation has lost an industrious, useful and upright citizen.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

He was not a great man, but an able one.—Detroit Journal.

TIME TO SMILE.

Mr. N. E. Verlyate—"Have you ceased to care for me, Adele? I came earlier this afternoon, and you do not even look glad to see me." Miss Adele Sartan—"Indeed, I am glad to see you. But this is my hour for resting my features from all expression."—Vogue.

Wife (sobbing)—"Some day you'll find me lying at death's door, and then what will you do?" Husband (counters)—"My dear, have you ever known me to be so ungallant as to allow a lady to open a door when I am present?"—Texas Siftings.

"Say, Blobs, why are you jabbing at your typewriter in that aimless fashion? There won't be any sense in what you are writing." "That won't make any difference. I'm getting up a few 'Pastels in Verse.'"—Buffalo Express.

He—"Why do you want me to stop the clock?" She—"It's one of those new photographic clocks, and since you've proposed there's nothing further for it to do."—Jeweler's Weekly.

"Poor Mr. Mills is so sympathetic. I think." Dolly—"What did he do?" "To-day he sat with his eyes closed on the car, rather than see the ladies stand up."—Inter-Ocean.

"Well, mademoiselle, isn't he a handsome fellow?" "Yes, he is, but certainly one of his legs is too short." "Too short? Quite the contrary; one of his legs is too long."—Flegende Blaetter.

Terrorized Passengers.

SEDALIA, Mo., Jan. 25.—Two men supposed to be two of the prisoners who escaped from the jail at Springfield Saturday boarded a train on the Sedalia, Warsaw & Southern Railroad, at Cole Camp, Berlin county, yesterday. They were both armed with revolvers and terrorized the passengers. The women took refuge in the baggage car, while the men on the train were powerless in face of the ruffians' revolvers. The two men left the train before it reached here having done no damage further than to frighten its passengers thoroughly.

EDITORIAL GRIST.

Only a Fanny Blossom.

Chicago Inter Ocean (Rep.)
This is "a reform Congress" and it proposes to rearrange the stars on the Blue. The bill proposes to scatter the 44, or possibly 46, stars ornament the flag with "anyway." The more those patriots let "old glory" alone the better. It is good enough and needs no change, except to add the new stars. The men who attempt to tamper with the old flag will have to dodge the fool killer the remaining days of their lives.

Would Like It Held.

Louville's Courier Journal (Dem.)
His death leaves a vacancy, which, if President Harrison shall heed the ethics and equities of the situation, as well as his own better inclination and judgment, will not be filled until after the inauguration of the new administration.

A National Humiliation.

Chicago Inter Ocean (Rep.)
The charge that our able American financiers could be bribed in the interest of the Panama canal by one or two paltry millions is not only libelous but humiliating to the last degree.

An Appreciative Legislator.

Charleston Gazette.
Fully appreciating "the power of the press," the drama of that name, presented at the Burlew Opera House last night, afforded Mr. Stewart W. Walker, of Berkeley county, an opportunity to show the representatives of the press how much he thought of them and their work, and it was not allowed to pass unnoticed. The press representatives were the guests of Mr. Walker at a box party followed by a banquet. Two boxes at the theatre were filled, and a jolly party it was. After the performance the crowd met at the Schwartz cafe, where an elegant banquet awaited them, and was hastily despatched, mingled with a continuous toast, responses to which came alternately from every side of the table. It was an elegant affair, and to Mr. Walker the representatives are indebted for one of the happiest events of the season. The banquet will ever be recalled by those who participated as among the happiest occurrences of the memorable session of the legislature of '93. The guests of Mr. Walker were: Hon. William A. Ohley, secretary of state; C. L. Hazen, state librarian; Hon. D. W. Gall, Philippi Plaindealer; Hon. C. L. Smith, Fairmont Index; H. V. Arkle, Wheeling Register; George A. Dunnington, Wheeling Irrigator; Roy B. Naylor, Wheeling News; Silas G. Crouch, West Virginia News Tribune; John O. Neale, Charleston Star-Tribune, and George W. Summers, Charleston Gazette.

MAY SAVE YOUR LIFE.

Interesting Facts in the Lives of Fa- mous Men.

Ralph Waldo Emerson, John McCullough,
Bartly Campbell, Charley
Johnes, Toney Hart.

A Dramatic and Thrilling Picture Worthy of a Balcony or a Dickens.

Ten years ago there was no such word as paretis. It cannot be found in Webster's dictionary. Now it is part of the vocabulary of every man who thinks and reads. Why? Simply because it has crept into the language, as the horrible disease which bears its name has crept into the brain of many men.
Bartley Campbell was a brilliant and successful playwright. Paretis claimed him. Insanity and death followed.
Charley Johnes, the most brilliant member of the New York Stock Exchange, followed Campbell. It used to be "What Charley Johnes said, bought, sold, and how he dressed." In Wall street six years ago. Now he is not even a name. Paretis.
John McCullough, the great tragedian, died of softening of the brain—paretis. Tony Hart was the next victim. Paretis set in. He was taken to Bloomingdale, where he died a few years ago.
George Knight, the famous actor, followed Hart; same cause, paretis. William Scanlan followed him; same cause; paretis. Harry Kornall followed Scanlan; same dreadful cause, paretis. Bright's disease is a consumption of the kidneys. Consumption is a wasting away of the lungs. Paretis is a consumption of the brain. Paretis comes to overwrought brains; to men who burn the candle at both ends and in the middle; to men who turn day into night and night into an inferno. It comes to men who cannot stand success. It comes to men who cannot control their appetites.
In the first stage the victim is going to do wonders. He is going to revolutionize things. He is abnormally good-natured, but he cannot get away from himself and his schemes for two consecutive minutes. The big I punctuates almost every sentence. The second stage comes. The victim forgets names. He often has to stop a few seconds before he can recall familiar names. He is nervous, restless, fretful and has sleepless nights from which he awakes tired and exhausted. He is always in a hurry. He listens instead of talks. He looks at his friends in the most pathetic manner, unconsciously. He drifts into the third stage. He thinks that his enemies are as the sands on the shore. He grows moody and depressed in mind. He is always preoccupied. He speaks in monosyllables. He neglects his dress and has no care of his personal appearance.
The fourth stage finds him at a loss for words. He begins a sentence, but never finishes it. He speaks as if he had two tongues in his mouth. He acts and talks so extravagantly that his friends induce him to enter a carriage for "a little drive to an out-of-town hotel." The hotel turns out to be an asylum for the insane.
He appears to rally as the days go by. In reality, he doesn't. He sits for hours at a time gazing at nothing. That is the saddest scene of all. He tries to recall things. It is painful to watch him, and have him look at you as if for help. Week after week he grows more helpless. In time he is like a year old baby. Then he dies.
There is a way out of this dreadful visitation, in its early stages. It may be prevented. It does not invariably come from dissipation, for Ralph Waldo Emerson died of it, and Guy de Maupassant is dying from it.
Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will cure victims in the early stages of paretis. It will feed the brain tissues and fill the brain cells. It will make new blood and muscle. It will make the nerves strong. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy always arrests paretis and prevents it if taken in time. Take it when the first symptoms appear and you are saved. It is a purely vegetable compound. It is harmless and the most valuable remedy in the world. It has cured thousands and thousands of men's many deadly diseases. Dr. Greene, the successful specialist in curing nervous and chronic diseases, is the discoverer of it. He can be consulted, personally or by letter, at his office, 35 W. 14th Street, New York, free of charge.
